HOME CIRCLE COLUMN

A COLUMN DEDICATED TO TIRED MOTHERS AS THEY JOIN THE HOME CIRCLE AT EVENING TIDE.

Discontent.

Upon the moon are treasures
We often have sought in vain,
For life is a round of pleasures,
And none are assailed by pain.

Each house has a golden steeple
And windows of silver light,
The rollicking, happy people
May caper from dawn till night.

But once they heard the story
Of our earth that shone on high,
And in envy of its glory
They began to weep and sigh.

"On that planet," they lamented,
"Things are truly gay and fair,
We shall never be contented
Till we're blessed by living there!"
—Stanton A. Coblenz

Decoration Day.

This year when Decoration Day dawns all of the boys who gave their services and their lives "over there" will have found their last resting place—either here in America or somewhere in France. It was a matter of personal opinion where each one should rest some mothers wanting all that was mortal of their boy back on their native soil. But wherever they rest each grave will undoubtedly be decorated on this Decoration Day.

Each year as we have watched the Decoration Day parade forming and listened to the services it has seemed that only to the old soldiers who fought in the Civil War did the ceremony really mean anything. To them it was a very solemn thing but to the younger men and especially to the children who took part in decorating the graves it meant nothing more than a "Decoration Day Parade." No one had ever explained to them the aching hearts behind all those graves they were decorating. No one had ever explained to them the horrors of war.

But now the veterans of the World war are young men still. They will not forget and let us hope they will not allow others to forget, the horrors through which they have passed to save the principle of freedom and democracy. Let us hope that the little children will imbibe some of their spirit and that they will grow up not with the old fashioned idea that war is a glorious thing and that to be a soldier is to be a glorified personage. Let us hope that they will grow up with a horror of war and of what it brings and that they will never submit to it. Therein lies the hope for the future. Therein lies the promise that future Decoration Days will not find fresh graves added to the already too long list to be decorated.

Let us consider these things on the coming Decoration Day. Let us "ponder them in our hearts" and resolve that if education can avoid this bloody god of war, we will not stint the education.

In this article in the Woman's Home Companion, Arthur Hopkins discourages the stage struck girl in his article, "Why Do You Want To Be An Actress?" He says there is no profession that is so crowded and no profession where the chance of attaining real distinction is so small.

The average income of the mediocre actress, and that class makes up about ninety per cent of the acting population, is about fifteen hundred dollars a year. When you consider the late hours, the poor traveling accommodations and absence from home and friends, the triumph to secure mere mediocrity is not worth the sacrifice.

When you were a child weren't there a whole lot of people about whom you had doubts if they were ever young? Didn't you think that they had doubts of it themselves? If you had asked them they would probably have said:

Miss Catherine Selak, 26, newly appointed Chief of Statistics of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, is known as a "figure bend," and the youngest woman ever to head a government division.

"Well, let me see. Yes I suppose I was. It sounds reasonable doesn't it?" That is just exactly what a lot of children are thinking today. And with good grounds. Older people manifest so little understanding of the habits and desires of children. Of course they are inquisitive. Everything is new to them. Why shouldn't they? They wouldn't be normal children if they didn't want to know the "why" of everything.

Just try and remember your own childhood and you will have a better understanding of the nature of the children today.
